

Be a Water Detective - being water smart in the garden

How are the lion and monkey being water smart?

©Jon Evans

Are they?

A. Chewing a long piece of licorice?

B. Going to make a tomato salad?

C. Using rainwater to water the tomato plants?

What would be a good name for the monkey?

What would be a good name for the lion?

Using rainwater instead of water from the tap means there is more water left in the river for Sameera and her friends.

Collecting rainwater means that when it rains, less rain goes into the sewers and so Clarence and his friends are less likely to end up with poo on their heads.